TEMPORARY STRUCTURE IS PLANNED

City Council Asked to Meet in Special Session to Grant the Permit that the Building May Go Up.

A special session of the city council was called vesterday afternoon to consider the application of the Union Pacific Reffrond company for a permit to build a temporary passenger station at Terth and Leavenworth streets, as announced by The Bee the other day. As the building is merely designed as a makeshift until arrangements than in Chicago or New York. This list infor the erection of a more substantial depot cludes the following articles: can be perfected it will be necessary to have a special permit by resolution of the rolled cars, commeal, feed, flour, hominy, assurance was received in regard to the minor articles.

The terminal question not only involves the Union Pacific and the Burlington roads, but also the Milwaukee, the Rock Island and the Northwestern lines. The three latter lines are dependent upon the Union Pacific for their entrance into Omaha and for adequate terminal facilities. It is the belief of the best posted railroad men in Omaha that these three roads will go into the Union Pacific's temporary depot. This course will mean that the Burlington will occupy its new passenger station at Tenth and Mason atreets on or about April 15, and that the other lines now entering the Union depot sheds will go with the Union Pacific into a temporary frame structure, just north of the Union Pacific tracks at about Tenth and Marcy streets.

MUST ACT VERY SOON.

The time set by the Burlington for re-celving applications from other railcoads for space in the Burlington depot will expire on Monday at midnight. None of the Bues have notified the Burlington that they will eater the new structure and it is conceded to be very improbable that any of them will. It can be stated authoritatively that the Burlington will make no opposition to such action by the council. There seems to be but one chance that some of the Chicago lines will make application to the Burlington to onter its new station. This event may occur if the Union Pacific's tempocary frame structure shall not prove to be adequate to handle the pastenger business during the coming exall probability never leave the Union Pacific and have been duly inspected by the city engineer. Arrangements for building matorial have been made and every effort will be put forth to fluish the proposed building by the time set for the opening of the exposition gates. The building will be of frame and brick and its dimensions will be similar to those of the Burlington's new star. and brick and its dimensions will be the tribute as which is good.

Emel Penn had been a witness to some stealing, but as he convinced the court that There is but little doubt but that the Union Pacific can complete such a structure as has been designed in time for the exposition. With the open weather that will in all probability be enjoyed during most of the spring the work can be pushed along rapidly. How long the structure will last after the close of the exposition is a question much discussed in local railway circles. is conceded that the character of the building will enable the municipal authorities to condemn it any time after it has served its purpose. While the building will be commodious, and even attractive, it will not be suitable for a passenger station of Horace G. Burt, president of the Union no information whatever to give out on the

Very Pleasantly.

The office of Mayor Moores was the theater noon, when his appointers and the other employes of the city took occasion to present him with a handsome life size painting of himself done in oil as a token of their esteem and loyalty. The mayor was detained in his office by some adroit maneuvering on the part of Secretary Adams, and the presentation was a total surprise. He was called out into the general office, which he disclosed when Street Superintendent Beyerly very appropriately presented the painting. Mr. Beverly very earnestly declared the loyalty which the donors held for their executive and particularly denounced the persecutions to which he had been subjected by political traitors and renegades. He referred to the record of Mayor Moores as a soldier, and voiced the sentiments of his oud comrades in arouring him of their

Public Confidence in Him Expressed by tack on the Mayor Presented for the Referee's Consideration and Decision.

The arguments in the Broatch-Moores case have been concluded. Attorney Boucher, for Mr. Moores, occupied the early part of the forenoon and was followed by John C Wharton, who finished during the afternoon The arguments were evidently a greater at traction than the testimony, as the county court room was well filled with spectators. Mr. Boucher's argument largely consisted of a presentation of authorities in support of the contentions previously suggested. He quoted voluminously from recent decisions bearing on the conduct of public officials and especially those in which the question of intent was considered. He produced overwhelming authorities in support of the proposition that corrupt motives were essential to constitute an embezziement and must be shown to warrent the conviction of the accused. He then briefly reviewed the conduct of Mr. Moores from the time when he eccupled the office of cleck of the district court to show that he had at all times acted in usiness enterprise in the shape of the fac- perfect good faith and was ready to pay over any amount that might be adjudged a due to the county or school board as soon as the legal questions involved were adjudicated

Mr. Wharton touched in beginning on the political phase of the persecution to which Mayor Moores was subjected at the hands remove to a larger city and Omaha was attended. The corpse had been dead many elected because it offered the best ad- months, but it was still stalking through the land, clothed in the babiliments of the must prevail. It has been customary in olden times to hire mourners in order to give dignity to the obsequies. So in case, after the republican party had eneloped W. J. Broatch with the grave clothes he had hired chief mourners, who were ex-pected to pipe and wail to show their sorrow at his demise. Redfield had joined this band and posed as one of the chief buglers. He had declared himself the only honest man in the republican party and as too good to associate with it longer. He had chosen presson and Black gave a say bond for their appearance, but Wild Bill failed to secure bail and was brought to Omaha yesterday and lodged in jail. When Wild Bill arrived in town he was just recovering from a spree and he very boisterously declared himself a terror and maintained that he was impressed of the charge brought against a large shrout that he had better wrap himself in same shrout that covered Broatch and was the covered Broatch and was to go before the people and submit his case to their verdict.
